My Mother Empowers Me, I Empower Others

All my life I have had all the support I could ever need and then some. There are so many people that have empowered me in my life, but of the many one person stands out the most. My mother has always encouraged and pushed me to do and be my best. While I have so much support I know others are not as fortunate as I am. I will go out of my way to help and empower others in the same way as my mother has done for me.

For as long as I can remember my mother has always supported my dreams, ambitions, and most of my choices. She not only supports what I aspire to do with my life, but pushes me to do the best I can. Over the past seventeen years she has empowered me to turn in my best work in school, try anything that peaks my interest because opportunities are everywhere. She has also taught me to work hard for what I have. She has done this through example and has explained it to me multiple times. She has helped me get through difficult classes that I thought I would either fail or not complete, but because of her I passed. This is the same in life, my mother has been there to help me through the toughest times of my life. She has helped me to learn from my mistakes and grow because of them, she has been there to help me stand back up and try again. My mother is the main reason I am who I am today, she has empowered me so much already and continues to every day.

I chose to empower other people by accepting their dreams and supporting them. I am always willing to help others in what they do, and support them in the decisions they make to get to their goal. I encourage others to attempt the opportunities that I took so that they can also learn as I have; I also push them to go for other opportunities that they could grow and learn from. But, while I am empowering other students now I wish to empower more and help them achieve their goals. I want to help create opportunities for them to experience what it will take to achieve these goals and how to get there. To empower students in a large way and in a large group is something that I would love to find a way to do, either it be a website or just simply inspiring others to empower those around them.

I believe that in life there is always going to be people that need help, everyone will need help and to be empowered. To be a person that can do that for someone is truly amazing and I know that it has helped me in my life. I hope to continue to inspire people to care about others and to support others. I am a very accepting and caring person, because everyone needs someone like that in their life. Empowering others is what inspires and pushes people to continue and to fight for their goals, this is a key component to success.
